Nov. 12, 2018

WASHINGTON — Jerome Corsi, a conspiracy theorist and friend of the longtime Trump adviser Roger J. Stone Jr., said on Monday that his two-month-long cooperation with the special counsel's office has broken down and he expects to be charged with lying to investigators or a federal grand jury.

Mr. Corsi, who said he has been cooperating since August with prosecutors working for the special counsel, Robert S. Mueller III, predicted his own indictment in a YouTube live stream that included a plea to listeners for money to cover his legal fees.

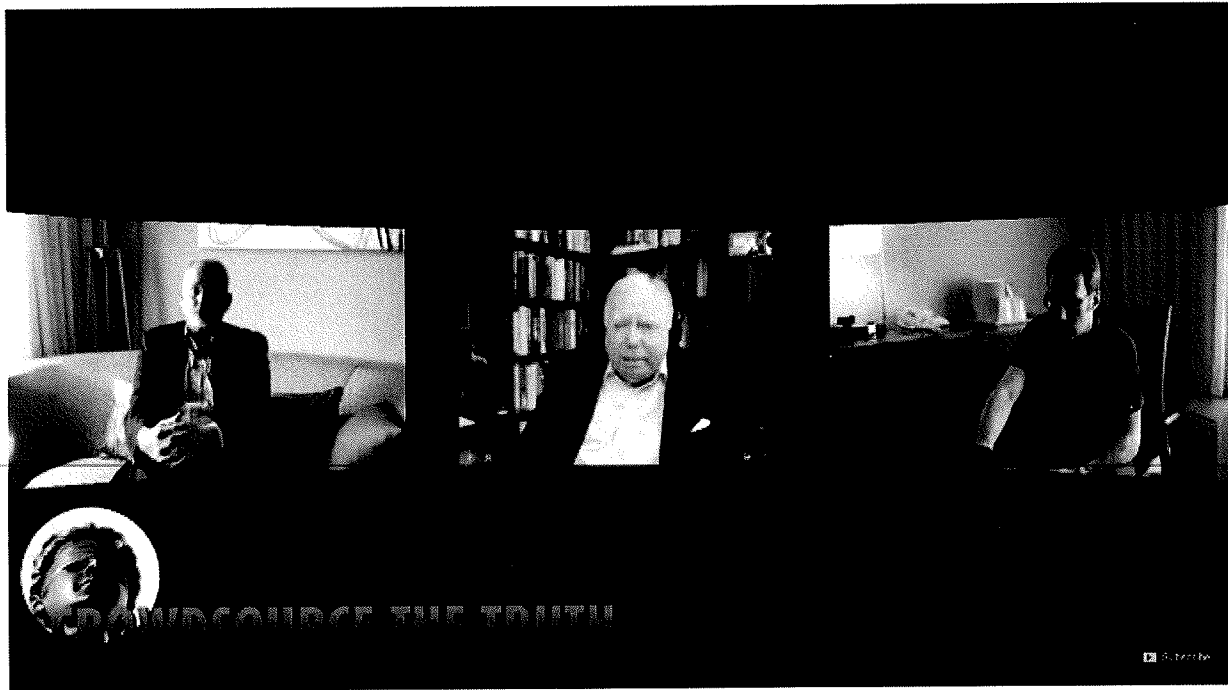

He offered no independent corroboration, and he has a long history of lobbying public grenades, including insisting that President Barack Obama was raised a Muslim and forged his birth certificate. Mr. Corsi's lawyer, David Gray, had no comment, nor did a spokesman for Mr. Mueller, who is investigating Russia's interference in the 2016 presidential election and whether any Trump associates were involved.

Mr. Corsi, 72, figures in the inquiry because he and Mr. Stone were apparently in touch with each other about WikiLeaks during the final months of the campaign. As part of a wide-ranging effort to undermine the election, Russian intelligence operatives had hacked Democratic emails, including those of Hillary Clinton's campaign chairman, John D. Podesta, and gave them to WikiLeaks to distribute.

GRAPEVINE

A DFW gala aims to raise money for former national security adviser General Michael Flynn ahead of his prison sentence in December.

The gala, organized by talk show host John B Wells, is called Operation Classified and will take place Friday through Sunday at the Hilton in Grapevine, according to the event’s news release.

“The event ... is billed as the largest-ever event supporting General Michael Flynn, features a who’s who of political leaders supporting a man they collectively call a great American patriot and hero,” the release says.

Flynn, President Donald Trump’s former national security adviser, was charged as part of Robert Mueller’s investigation into Russian meddling in the 2016 presidential election and possible coordination with the Trump campaign.

On Dec. 1, 2017, Flynn pleaded guilty to lying to the F.B.I. about conversations with the Russian ambassador in a plea deal with Mueller.

He is to set to be sentenced on Dec. 18.

Wells, the former host of late-night talk show “Coast to Coast,” said he wanted to raise money to help Flynn. He said Flynn was forced to sell his family home and lost all his money in legal defense fees during and after the Mueller investigation.

“This is a just cause. The way (Flynn) was treated and vilified and all this nonsense going on in the Mueller investigation spurred us into action,” Wells said. “He’s a fine man. He hasn’t played the victim, he didn’t ask us to do this.”

Wells said on Friday, 500 to 600 people from across the country were at the event. He expects that number to double or triple on Saturday and Sunday.

“If you are accused of a federal crime, you don’t have to be guilty of anything, you can be totally innocent. But it will cost you every dollar you have or every dollar you’re gonna have just to defend yourself from those charges,” Wells said.

1 According to the event's website, attendees "will come away with a comprehensive
2 understanding of the Deep State and they will concurrently be directly supporting General
3 Michael Flynn."

4 Speakers at the event include:

- William Federer, Writer and historian
- Demetra Antimisiaris, PharmD Associate Professor
- Ty Bollinger, cancer researcher and writer

• Stewart Rhodes, Founder of the Oathkeepers

8 "It is a lineup heretofore unseen, designed to connect all of the dots that form the prison cell
9 architecture that we call the Deep State," John B Wells said in the release. "If you want to know,
10 you've gotta show."

11 Under the plea agreement, Flynn is under a gag order so his brother, Joseph Flynn, will be 12 speaking at the gala in his place, event organizers said.

13 Wells issued a statement about the event in the release. He said he and his wife, Brendi Wells,
14 organized the event and it is designed to raise awareness and finances for Flynn.

15 "I would argue that Lieutenant General Michael Flynn represents all American Patriots, certainly 16 those on the right. The power behind the DNC, the "progressives" (in reality, socialists) is that 17 they support each other in a manner that more independently minded conservative Americans do
18 not," he said. "General Flynn is a victim of political expedience, political skullduggery and 19 lawfare. He defended his son, like any father would and the left crewed up and destroyed the 20 man's reputation, his families' reputations and his finances."

21 Interviews conducted by special counsel investigators included questions about the business
22 dealings of Flynn and his son, who served as his father's chief of staff and top aide.
23 Flynn's sister, Barbara Flynn Redgate, and brother, Joseph Flynn, started a legal defense fund for 24 Flynn in September 2017. Operation Classified is working with Flynn's family to help raise 25 funds.

As a newly minted officer in the U.S. Army reserves, Scott Allan Bennett received rave reviews from his superiors at the 11th Psychological Operations Battalion during his first evaluation as a 2nd Lieutenant. Bennett, a personnel officer, was lauded, among other things, for devising a system to ensure evaluations were done on time. He was recommended for promotion. "His future with the Army is unlimited," wrote one superior officer. Then came the lies, prosecutors say.

Even before his evaluation was done, Bennett wrote an email to his civilian employer, military contractor Booz Allen Hamilton, seeking a position at MacDill Air Force Base. In the email, Bennett inflated his role with the Army. In the email, introduced this morning at Bennett's federal trial on charges that he lied his way onto housing at MacDill Air Force Base, Bennett told Booz Allen Hamilton officials that he was a "psychological operations officer" with counterterrorism experience and an "Islam analyst" who had worked with U.S. Special Operations Command and the State Department. He wrote that he had a secondary military specialty as a personnel officer. But that wasn't true, Lt. Col. Joel Droba, an Army reservist and commander of Bennett's battalion, testified. Bennett was not a psychological operations officer, had not undergone the training, and served in a support role as a personnel officer. And Bennett never had any orders from Special Operations Command during his tenure with the battalion. Army Lt. Col. Frank Harrar, aide de camp to Special Operations Command chief Adm. Eric Olson, later testified that Socom had no record of contracts with Bennett. In January, 2010, Booz Allen Hamilton approved a contract for Bennett to work as a counter-threat finance analyst at the Joint Intelligence Operations Center at U.S. Central Command. Prosecutors: Army reservist inflated role with military

As a newly minted officer in the U.S. Army reserves, Scott Allan Bennett received rave reviews from his superiors at the 11th Psychological Operations Battalion during his first evaluation as a 2nd Lieutenant. Bennett, a personnel officer, was lauded, among other things, for devising a system to ensure evaluations were done on time. He was recommended for promotion. "His future with the Army is unlimited," wrote one superior officer. Then came the lies, prosecutors say.

Even before his evaluation was done, Bennett wrote an email to his civilian employer, military contractor Booz Allen Hamilton, seeking a position at MacDill Air Force Base. In the email, Bennett inflated his role with the Army. In the email, introduced this morning at Bennett's federal trial on charges that he lied his way onto housing at MacDill Air Force Base, Bennett told Booz Allen Hamilton officials that he was a "psychological operations officer" with counterterrorism experience and an "Islam analyst" who had worked with U.S. Special Operations Command and the State Department. He wrote that he had a secondary military specialty as a personnel officer. But that wasn't true, Lt. Col. Joel Droba, an Army reservist and commander of Bennett's battalion, testified. Bennett was not a psychological operations officer, had not undergone the training, and served in a support role as a personnel officer. And Bennett never had any orders from Special Operations Command during his tenure with the battalion. Army Lt. Col Frank Harrar, aide de camp to Special Operations Command chief Adm. Eric Olson, later testified that Socom had no record of contracts with Bennett. In January, 2010, Booz Allen Hamilton approved a contract for Bennett to work as a counter-threat finance analyst at the Joint Intelligence Operations Center at U.S. Central Command. Later that month, investigators say that after arriving at MacDill on a flight with Special Operations Command commander Adm. Eric Olson, Bennett told base housing officials that though he didn't have all the documentation he needed to move onto the base, he was an aide to the admiral, was on a secret mission and needed housing immediately. Housing officials allowed him to move in despite not having provided copies of his orders or a military pay stub. Then at about 2 a.m. on April 23, he showed up at the Dale Mabry gate and was stopped for a routine security inspection. An inspection of his car found two knives and an empty gun holster. Bennett denied having more weapons when asked by a guard. Bennett, according to investigators, appeared confused during the encounter, and Tampa police were called in. Police found a concealed weapon on Bennett

1 and upon inspection of the car found a loaded handgun, three more knives, a box of throwing
2 stars, a large machete, a collapsible baton, a sling shot with BBs and mace. Bennett also had a
3 stun gun and had concealed weapons permits from Utah and Virginia. After being released by
4 police, Bennett returned to the gate, where he was arrested and read his rights. Bennett
5 refused a request by Air Force police to inspect his base housing, and investigators obtained a
6 search warrant through a military court. Once inside Bennett's housing, investigators found
7 seven loaded firearms, 9,389 rounds of ammunition, numerous knives, an electric stun gun
8 and a collapsible baton in addition to other weapons and unnamed prohibited material.
9 Under MacDill regulations, Bennett was supposed to report any weapons and ammunition.
10 According to investigators, he failed to do so. Bennett was fired by Booz Allen Hamilton shortly
11 after the incident at the gate. The DUI charges against Bennett were dropped by state
12 prosecutors after Bennett, 40, was charged with one count of making a false statement on a 13 matter within the jurisdiction of the executive branch of the government, one count of wearing
14 his uniform without authorization and one count of violating a defense property security
15 agreement by storing weapons and ammunition in his apartment without permission of the base.
16 Bennett has pleaded not guilty. The prosecution is scheduled to rest its case early tomorrow and 17 it may go to the jury Thursday afternoon. Defense attorneys would not say whether Bennett will 18 take the stand. Shortly after the incident at the Dale Mabry gate, Droba wrote a second annual 19 review of Bennett, who is still in the reserves, but has been stripped of his access to MacDill and 20 his top secret security clearance. While he was still performing his military duties in an 21 exemplary fashion, Bennett failed the honor and integrity portions of the review. "Did Lt.
22 Bennett discredit the Army?" a prosecutor asked Droba this morning. "In my opinion," he
23 replied, "yes." [emphasis added]
